

It is imperative that we maintain a number of choices for the public from which they can receive communications. Ownership of all media outlets in one area by one company limits the public's ability to fully understand a variety of issues. Healthy debate does not occur without many viewpoints and it can produce valid decisions for the community.